Every year Texas hospitals provide specialized emergency inpatient care to individuals experiencing a behavioral health crisis. Hospital reimbursement rarely covers the full cost of providing that care. For some behavioral health patients, hospitals must have an emergency detention order, order of protective custody or medication hearing in order to provide treatment. Certain counties in Texas collect fees for these orders and hearings. Hospitals incur the court costs and are not always fully reimbursed.